CHILSON'S

NEW COOKING STOVE.

Believing that great improvements could be made in the construction and workmanship of Cooking Stoves, and that such improvements would be appreciated by the public, and feeling convinced that a long practical experience in the manufacture of Stoves, would enable the subscriber to be successful in the undertaking, he has devoted himself energetically for two years to this object; and, as a result, is now prepared to show, he is happy to say, the most important improvements ever made in Cooking Stoves in the United States. This statement is fully confirmed by the large number of Testimonials received from those who have used these Stoves the past season; and five minutes' examination of the Stove itself will further prove all that is claimed for it.

PREFACE.

THE second number of this work has been compiled with great care, and is now presented to the public in a fair and respectable style.

The towns and cities have been well canvassed for information. The business community have been called upon for their advertising patronage, and have generally responded cheerfully to the requirements of the work. They have our thanks. We earnestly desire that all, who look upon this enterprise with favor, will remember our patrons, and go to them when in want of such things as they can supply. The book could not have been successful without the advertising patronage; and some of the advertisers have favored us chiefly with a view to help on the good cause. Do not overlook these public benefactors.

The historical matter has been copied from such published books as we could find. The works of Baylies, Ricketson, Barber, Daggett, Emery, Bliss, and the historian of Norton have been used freely. Some sketches have been taken from the newspapers, the Mass. Historical Collections and other periodicals.

The Town Clerks and Postmasters have furnished us with many facts and statistics. For all these favors we are very grateful.

The sketches are necessarily brief; but, in future numbers, they will be greatly extended and brought down to the present day.

WALKER'S FURNACE.

THREE SIZES PORTABLE.

THREE SIZES BRICK.

This Furnace is constructed upon a new and improved principle. The products of combustion pass across the upper and lower domes in such a manner as secures economy of fuel and a more equal distribution of heat to their surfaces. Its spacious sifting chamber and receptacle for ashes makes it very desirable in this respect. It is provided with double self-packing joints, thus avoiding the escape of gas and dust. The form of its surfaces insures equal expansion (a great desideratum), as it prevents the opening of joints and warping.

We hope it will be your pleasure to examine this Furnace before purchasing another kind.

HISTORY OF BRISTOL COUNTY.

This part of the State was called by the Indians "Pawcunnawcut." The County was incorporated June 2, 1865.

Its surface is generally level, though somewhat broken, in many places.

Its sea-coast is marked with headlands, and indented with small bays and harbors.

Many streams rise in the County, falling into Massachusetts and Narraganset bays, and nearly every town has a good water power. Iron ore abounds here, and is extensively manufactured into utensils of great value to the country.

Taunton and New Bedford are the County towns.

The total population of this County in 1865 was 89,395.

ACUSHNET.

Acushnet, formerly a part of Fairhaven, was incorporated in 1860, deriving its name from the Acushnet River, which flows through it. This town has two villages, called Acushnet Village, and Long Plain, each having a Post Office. It is bounded on the north by Freetown, on the east by Rehoboth, on the south by Fairhaven, and on the west by New Bedford, being four miles from the latter city.

The land, comprising an area of 12,500 acres, is generally level and fertile. The village of Acushnet was one of the earliest settled parts of the old township of Dartmouth, and dates nearly fifty years before New Bedford. It lies upon both sides of the river, the east part being in Fairhaven, and the west in New Bedford; the dividing line taking a northwesterly direction from the bridge, leaving the river above, and a narrow strip of land which gradually widens to the most northern boundary of Old Dartmouth, on the Fairhaven side.

The village contains three meeting-houses, one Congregational, one Methodist, and one Friends'. The celebrated divine, Dr. Samuel West, D.D., was settled here for many years. The old meeting-house in which he preached formerly stood upon the top of the hill on the east side of the river. The graveyard connected with it was one of the oldest in the State. The view from the hill near this old cemetery, looking over the valley of the river, is remarkable for its picturesque beauty.

A considerable destruction of property took place here by the British troops, at the time of their attack upon New Bedford, several dwelling-houses being burned by them. Acushnet comprises 7,900 acres of cleared land and 4,600 acres of woodland. The principal products are Boats, Boots and Shoes, Snuff, Tobacco and Cigars, Wooden boxes, Lumber, Firewood and Bark, Indian Corn, Rye and Wheat. Population in 1865, 1,251.

ATTLEBOROUGH.

Capt. Thomas Willet was employed by the town of Rehoboth to purchase a new tract of land, he having been first empowered by the Court for that purpose.

Accordingly he purchased of the Sachem of Pokanocket (Wamsitta) a certain tract north of Rehoboth, and it was afterwards called the "North Purchase." Wamsitta was an elder brother to King Philip.

This North Purchase, which subsequently became Attleborough, was bounded west by Pawtucket River, now Blackstone River; north by Massachusetts Colony; east by the territory, which afterwards became Mansfield, Norton and Easton; and south by ancient Rehoboth, which comprised what is now the territory of Rehoboth, Seekonk and Pawtucket.

This tract included not only Attleborough, but Cumberland, R. I., and some other lands.

The first division of lands in the North Purchase was made in 1658, but this was only a division of the meadows at the north side of the town of Rehoboth.

The first general division of lands was granted by the proprietors in 1668.

The inhabitants of the North Purchase were incorporated into a township by the name of Attleborough, in 1694.

The first town meeting on record was held May 11, 1696. The former meetings are not recorded.

March 22d, 1696–7. The town of Attleborough, finding very few allowed to vote, ordered that "all the inhabitants and town dwellers should have a right to vote in said meetings."

The inhabitants were often disturbed by Indians and others hunting and strolling about and insulting the citizens.

The town held a meeting in relation to these matters, and ordered that " no stranger should be received as an inhabitant without the consent of the town, or sufficient security given by him that shall harbor such person contrary to this order ; and the selectmen were ordered to take due care in behalf of the town, and to give warning to such strangers or foreigners to depart the town, according as the law directs." .

Another order was passed that such Indians or other strangers as had been complained of for uncivil behavior towards the inhabitants should not be allowed to come into the town armed, on pretence of hunting, or suffered in the same to abide in drinkings and shootings at unseasonable times of night, etc.

The first inhabitant was Wm. Blackstone, who was also the first settler of Shawmut, now Boston.

The whole of Boston was then called Blackstone's Neck. In 1634, he sold his right and title in this peninsula to the inhabitants of Boston, each one paying him six shillings, and some of them more.

With the purchase money he bought a stock of cows, which he carried with him, in 1635, to his new settlement on the banks of the Pawtucket River, which is now called Blackstone River. This place was within the ancient limits of Attleborough, in that part called the Gore, now Cumberland, R. I. His residence was on a hill near the river. It is still called " Study Hill."

Here he lived many years alone, and enjoyed his library and his solitary walks.

In 1659 he married widow Sarah Stevenson, of Boston, who died in 1673. He died in 1675. He had resided in New England about fifty years, and in Attleborough forty years, being not far from eighty at the time of his decease.

He cultivated his garden and orchard with his own hands. Some of his trees lived over one hundred and forty years. He frequently visited Roger Williams in Rhode Island, and occasionally preached at Providence and the neighboring towns.

His only son, John Blackstone, moved away from Attleborough in early life, and none of his posterity have ever since resided in this vicinity. Indeed it is doubtful if there are any descendants of him living, although it is possible there may be some in Connecticut.

The first settlement within the present town of Attleborough, was near the Baptist meeting-house. It was commenced soon after 1669, by Mr. John Woodcock and his sons. His house was occupied for a garrison. In 1670, it was licensed for a tavern. A public house was kept on the same spot without intermission from 1670 to 1833.

Woodcock was a conspicuous citizen. He was chosen Deputy to the General Court in 1691. He was a great enemy of the Indians, holding their rights in low estimation. On one occasion he entered an Indian house and took away a child and some goods, as payment for a debt, which the Indian owed him. But the Court punished this offence. His death occurred in 1701, at a very advanced age in spite of many attempts made by the Indians to destroy him. It is said, after his death, the scars of seven bullets were counted on his body. His house was a great rendezvous in the war of King Philip.

Woodcock sold his house and land to John Devotion of Muddy River (Brookline). After occupying it seventeen years, Devotion sold it to John Daggett of Chilmark for four hundred pounds.

This was the first of the name of Daggett in this town.

In 1722, Daggett sold the estate to Alexander Maxcy. He dying soon, his son Josiah inherited it, and dying in 1772, or before, it came to Levi Maxcy, who occupied it till about 1780, when he sold it to Col. Israel Hatch. The first house stood one hundred and thirty-six years. Another early settlement was at the Falls, now called the Falls Factories. John Daggett in 1677 sold fifty acres of it to his brother Thomas Daggett, of Martha's Vineyard.

The first mill in town was a corn mill built at the Falls, and owned by Joseph Daggett. The southeast corner of the town was early inhabited by people from Rehoboth. The borders of the Bay Road, which passed through the neighborhood of Newell's and the city, were the first settled places. This was the main route from Bristol to Boston, and was the first road in Attleborough.

In 1676 the Indians attacked Woodcock's Garrison, as his house was called. His sons were at work in a field, near by which the savages lay concealed. Approaching, they fired on the sons, killing one, and the other fled to the garrison. The Indians, to gratify their spite against this family, cut off the head of the fallen son, and stuck it up on a long pole, which they set upon a hill in front of the house to aggravate the feelings of the family.

From this time Woodcock swore never to make peace with the Indians. Being a man of resolute character he hunted them like wild beasts, and many of the wild race fell victims to his vengeance.

The son that fell was Nathaniel. His body was buried on the spot where he fell, which is nearly the centre of the old burial ground. A celebrated fight took place in the part of Attleborough, now Cumberland, R. I., on Sunday, March 26, 1676. The spot is still pointed out near the Blackstone River.

Capt. Michael Pierce of Scituate, with sixty-three Englishmen and twenty Cape Indians, attacked a body of five hundred Indians, and courageously pursued them, when they began slowly to retreat; but there soon appeared another company of four hundred Indians, who completely surrounded the English. Being thus attacked both in front and rear by an overwhelming force, all chance of retreat was cut off. However, they determined to fight to the last, and nobly did they submit to their fate. Capt. Pierce formed his men into a circle back to back, four paces apart, thus enlarging the circle as much as possible, and presenting a front to the enemy in all directions, while the Indians stood about thirty deep. Capt. P. and his men fought bravely, and were nearly all killed. Not a single white man escaped to tell the tale; but the Indians lost about three hundred warriors. This was the greatest defeat of the Plymouth Colony men during the whole war. But the Indians were often vanquished by the brave Woodcock and his neighbors in well-contested fields.

For several years after the incorporation of the town there was no settled minister.

The first was Rev. Matthew Short, who was ordained 12th November, 1712, and continued here about four years at fifty pounds a year. The first meeting-house was built in 1710, and was thirty feet square.

The second minister was Rev. Ebenezer White (son of James White of Dorchester, Mass.), a graduate of Harvard College in 1703. He preached here eleven years, and died in the town September 4, 1726.

Rev. Habijah Weld was the third minister, and continued pastor of Attleborough fifty-five years. He was born at Dunstable in 1702, graduated at Harvard College in 1723, and died here in 1782.

He was universally lamented, being alike distinguished for his talents and excellence of character. At his death only one of his congregation was living of those who assisted in his settlement. In 1728, a new meeting-house was built by the town.

The town continued one parish till 1743, when it was divided into two by act of the Legislature. The West was the first parish, and the East the second. From the time of Mr. Weld's death, for eight years the town was without a minister.

Rev. John Wilder was settled here in 1790, and dismissed in 1822. To him succeeded Rev. Thomas Williams in 1824, whose successor was Rev. Charles J. Warren, in 1828.

The first pastor of the second Congregationalist Church in Attleborough was Rev. Peter Thacher, who graduated at Harvard College in 1737, and preached here from 1743 until his decease, in 1748. He was son of Rev. Peter Thacher of Middleborough, and many of his ancestors had been clergymen, both in this country and England. In 1793 Rev. Ebenezer Lazell of Bridgewater was ordained pastor of this church. The next minister was Rev. Nathan Holman of Sutton, in 1800.

BERKLEY.

This is a farming town, and is situated on the east side of Taunton River. It was formerly a part of Dighton, and was incorporated in 1735. Taunton River divides it from Dighton. The celebrated Dighton rock is in Berkley.

The town is thirty-seven miles south of Boston, and five from Taunton.

Rev. Samuel Tobey was the first minister in 1737. Population in 1865, 847.

Berkley became a distinct town in 1735, having been a part of the original Taunton Purchase of 1637, although a portion of it belonged to the South Purchase, and had been included in Dighton up to the time of its becoming a separate township.

A church was organized November 2, 1737, and Rev. Samuel Tobey was the first pastor.

He was born at Sandwich, Mass., in 1715, graduated at Cambridge in 1733, and was ordained in Berkley, November 23, 1737.

His ministry extended to the time of his death, in 1781.

DARTMOUTH.

This town originally consisted of the tract of land known by the Indians as "Acushena," "Ponagansett," and "Coaksett," which places by order of Court were united into one township under the name of Dartmouth, in 1664. This tract of land was purchased of the Indians by a party of thirty-six individuals, who met at Plymouth on the 7th of March, 1652, and who, by joint consent, made an equal division of the land. It would seem that only a very small portion of these original owners settled upon this territory; but the land appears to have been taken up by a class of people not particularly identified with the Puritans, and many of them were Quakers from the government at Plymouth. They are represented as being a frugal and industrious people, and were chiefly occupied in agricultural pursuits. The principal difficulty which the Court found with these people seems to have been derived from want of obedience to the rigid requirements in regard to the support of the ministry, and the observance of the Sabbath according to the views of the government. But with a strong admixture of the nonconformity of the disciples of George Fox, they baffled the efforts of the officials with a steady perseverance, and, in the year 1691, they refused the payment of taxes, and sent no representative to the Court.

The people of Dartmouth were great sufferers from the loss of property destroyed by the Indians, owing to their scattered way of living.

In 1694 it seems that Dartmouth was owned by fifty-six persons, and the land being subsequently surveyed by Benjamin Crane, was divided, and each proprietor received 800 acres.

There are several houses still standing, built by the original settlers, dating back to the time immediately succeeding "King Philip's War," which commenced in 1675. During this war, the inhabitants were completely dispersed by the Indians, and it is probable that most of the houses, except such as were used as garrisons, were destroyed. There was recently one of these old houses standing three miles from New Bedford, on a cross road a mile northeast from the village of Padanaram, formerly occupied by David Howland, who died several years since at an advanced age. Another, still in good preservation, which stood about four miles to the southwest of Russell's Mills, owned by Peleg Sherman, and known as the "old Ricketson house," which was built by William Ricketson, who died in 1691. His wife was Elizabeth Ricketson, whose name appears in the list of proprietors. Willam Ricketson was one of the original proprietors of Dartmouth, and the ancestor of those who bear his name in Bristol County.

The old stock of Dartmouth was an industrious as well as a hardy and vigorous race, and to this day, a good share of these qualities remains, giving enterprise and endurance to their possessors.

In 1665, the township of Dartmouth was represented at the Old Colony Court, Plymouth, for the first time, by John Russell, probably a son of Ralph Russell, who established the iron forge at Russell's Mills. John Russell represented the town of Dartmouth from 1665 to 1683, with the exception of two years, viz., 1666 and 1673, when John Cooke (whose name, as well as that of John Russell, is among those of the original proprietors), was chosen; 1685, Joseph Tripp was the representative; 1686, John Cooke, 1689–90, Seth Pope.

The village of Russell's Mills is situated in the southern part of the township of Dartmouth, about seven miles southwest from New Bedford, and four miles north of Buzzard's Bay. The shore of Dartmouth, in its original comprehensiveness, with its bays and inlets, more than twenty miles in length, is one of the finest marine coasts in New England; the soil is naturally fertile; and from the products of the ocean, the seaweed and kelp, besides the rockweed and the fish—menhaden, seined in the spring, and used for oil and fertilizers — the farms are usually productive, and improved by a substantial and thrifty people.

Padanaram, in South Dartmouth, about three miles west of New Bedford, is pleasantly located on the east side of Apponeganset River, so called, but which is rather an inlet from Buzzard's Bay, over which there is a substantial stone bridge, leading to that part of Dartmouth known as Nomquid, or "Smith's Neck." It contains upwards of sixty dwelling-houses, a Post-Office, and a Congregational church. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the whale fishery. It is advantageously situated, for a summer resort, from the vicinity of the sea.

With the ancient name, Dartmouth retained the largest proportion in the division of the old township in 1787. At that time it occupied a space of about fourteen miles by about five miles. The earliest record relative to Dartmouth bears date 2d March, 1640–41, when Gov. Bradford surrendered to the freemen the patent of the colony, which had been taken in his name, reserving those tracts described in the instrument of assignment for the purchasers, or old-comers.

During Philip's war, a great part of Dartmouth was laid desolate, and many of the inhabitants killed. The part that was destroyed is about five miles southwest of New Bedford.

The agricultural interests of Dartmouth are quite important, there being many valuable farms within its limits, and prosperity and thrift is characteristic of the people. The three principal settlements are the villages of Smith's Mills, Padanaram, and Russell's Mills. There is a Post-Office at each of these places. In 1837, there were five vessels, amounting to 1,490 tonnage, and the amount of sperm oil imported was 74,000 gallons, and of whale oil 73,978 gallons. In 1865, the value of the whale fishery was as follows: sperm oil, $49,608; whale oil, $62,179; spermaceti, $24,804; whalebone, $37,161.

Ship building was formerly carried on quite largely. The manufacture of salt was very extensive. Many of the citizens of Dartmouth, as well as Westport, are interested in the whale fishery, and other business in New Bedford.

Dartmouth is bounded by Fall River and Freetown on the north, New Bedford on the east, and by Buzzard's Bay on the south and southeast. Population, 3,435.

DIGHTON.

The Old Colony and Newport Railroad passes through the town. Its principal villages are Dighton Village, North Dighton, and West Dighton. The post-offices are located at Dighton Village and North Dighton. The town is bounded on the north by Taunton, on the east by Taunton River, on the south by Somerset and Swansea, and on the west by Rehoboth. It is forty-one miles from Boston, fifteen from Providence, and five from Taunton. The land is good for farming, being undulating, with some hills.

By an act of incorporation, Dighton was set off as a separate town in 1712, a short time after that of Norton. It is supposed to have derived its name from the Dighton family, one of whom, Frances, was the wife of Richard Williams, principal purchaser of the "South Purchase," so called, which was made of the Sachem Philip, in 1672, for one hundred and forty-three pounds. She was a woman worthy of the distinguished honor which the inhabitants of that part of the town sought to bestow upon her. Rev. Nathaniel Fisher was its first minister, and was settled as pastor of the South Precinct of Taunton in 1710, two years prior to the incorporation of Dighton as a town by itself. Mr. Fisher was settled in Dighton not far from fifty years.

EASTON.

This town, which is the northeastern corner of Bristol County, was formerly a part of Taunton. It was incorporated in 1725. It is on the Old Colony and Newport Railroad, and is about twenty-four miles from Boston. There are three manufacturing villages, South, West, and North Easton. The latter is much the largest, containing from 1,500 to 2,000 inhabitants, which is fully one-half the population of the whole town.

Manufactories.—At South Easton there is a thread factory and a machine shop. At West Easton there are two iron manufactories, one malleable and the other gray. The former employs twenty-five hands, and the latter fourteen.

The Great Shovel Manufactory of the two brothers Ames, at North Easton, is the most important establishment in town. In 1837, it is said, there were two manufactories of shovels, spades, forks, hoes, at which eighty-four hands were employed; and articles to the value of $108,000 were manufactured. Now, Ames's establishment alone employs about five hundred hands, a large portion of whom are foreigners; and its business is a million and a half dollars a year. Four hundred dozen, or 4,800 shovels are finished per day, and yet they are often unable to fill all their orders. The handles are obtained from Maine and Michigan.

New Schoolhouse.—The proprietors of this shovel establishment have nobly met a large portion of the expense of erecting a magnificent schoolhouse, with a highly ornamental steeple and clock, on a commanding site not far from their works, at a cost of from forty to fifty thousand dollars. It would be an ornament to any city.

There are Six Churches in town,—a Catholic, two Unitarian, two Methodist, and a Congregational. The latter, and one of the Unitarian, are situated between the south and west villages, about a mile from the former and two from the latter. The late Rev. Dr. Sheldon was pastor of the Orthodox Congregational Church sixty years. He died three years ago this autumn, at the age of eighty-one, having been settled at the early age of twenty-one.

Politically this town is strongly Republican. The subject of temperance has not been much agitated among the people of late.

FALL RIVER.

This was formerly a part of Freetown, and was incorporated in 1803 by the name of Troy. The village here had previously been called "Fall River," and in 1834 the name of Troy was changed to that of Fall River, this being the name of its river. About 1810 there were only eleven dwellings in the place. The principal families were then Durfee, Duffington, Luther, Borden, and Bowen.

The first meeting-house in the town stood on the line between Fall River and Tiverton. The next place of worship was a small building erected for the Friends, near where their present house stands.

The third was a Congregational Church. Then followed the Baptist meeting-house, and one for the Methodists.

The enemy sent a company here in time of the Revolution, numbering about two hundred, who landed in the south part of the present village. Col. Joseph Durfee with fifteen of the inhabitants fired on them from behind stone walls, and killed two soldiers; whereupon they rapidly retreated to their barges. These two British soldiers still lie buried in the old town graveyard of Fall River, as memorials of the pluck of the old villagers.

The Watuppa Ponds, which are the source of Fall River (the stream giving name to the city), are about two miles east of the town. They are fed by perennial springs. The fall of the river is one hundred and thirty-six feet, and there is little change in the volume of water at different seasons of the year. There is a good harbor on Taunton River, sufficiently deep for large ships.

The hydraulic power of the falls is very great, and upon these stand the chief manufacturing establishments. Another favorable circumstance is that the bed of the river is granite throughout its entire course.

About 1830, a dam was built at the outlet of the ponds by which they were raised two feet.

In 1843 a large part of Fall River village was destroyed by fire. It was a very dry time, and the wind blew a gale. Besides this, it was Sunday, and the fire started at three o'clock, P. M., when many of the inhabitants were at church. Over half a million dollars' worth of property was consumed. But the energy of the people soon rebuilt the burnt district, and extended the city in every direction.

The Indians called this locality Quequeteant. It is fifty-two miles south of Boston and seventeen south of Taunton.

FAIRHAVEN.

This town, being originally a part of the old township of Dartmouth, was, in 1787, divided off, together with New Bedford, and remained a part of the same until 1812, when they were made separate townships. The settlement of both of these towns took place in 1764. It is supposed that this place derived its name from the pleasant situation, which more properly belongs to the northern part of the village, known as Oxford, the ground there being more elevated, and consequently the view from the houses, much more commanding. The town is about thirteen miles in length, and its breadth about three and a half. It is bounded on the north by Freetown and Rochester, east by Rochester and Mattapoisett; south by Buzzard's Bay, and west by New Bedford. Fairhaven is quite noted for its whale-fishery, and with New London, ranks next to New Bedford in point of tonnage in this department of commerce.

FREETOWN.

This town was first settled in 1659, and incorporated in 1683. Assonet is the principal village, situated at the head of an inlet from Taunton River, eight miles from Taunton.

The Indian name was Assonet. The first minister was William Way, who was teacher here in 1704. There is some manufacturing in Freetown, but the principal business is agriculture.

MANSFIELD.

This town was originally the north parish of Norton. It was incorporated in 1770. The central part of the town is twelve miles from Taunton and twenty-eight from Boston. One of the most distinguished settlers of this place was Col. Ephraim Leonard. His house stood two miles eastward of the Congregational church in the centre of the town.

Rev. Mr. White, the first minister, lived about one mile south of the meeting-house.

Nathan Williams was another early settler.

The Wellmans lived half a mile south of the meeting-house.

Deacon Abial Leonard dwelt about three miles from the same point.

The Williams families owned lands north of the meeting-house extending to the Old Colony line.

The Deans dwelt in the south part of the town.

There were other families by the names of Skinner and Grover.

The rivers of Mansfield are Rumford, Cocasset and Canoe.

The principal business is the manufacture of straw, hats and bonnets, hollow-ware, castings, cutlery, tacks, etc., and farming. The population in 1865, was 2,130.

NEW BEDFORD.

This town, originally a part of Dartmouth, was set off and incorporated in 1787, the township having been purchased of the Indians in 1652, then comprising what are now known as Fairhaven, New Bedford and Westport. That part of the township constituting New Bedford was called by the Indians "Acushnet," or Accoosnet. The Indians inhabiting this part of the country were the Acushnets, Apponegansets, and Acoaxsets, being a part of the great tribe of Wampanoags, whose chief Sachem was Massasoit.

In 1765, Joseph Rotch moved to this place from Nantucket and established the whale fishery, having previously visited Wood's Hole, where he was unsuccessful in obtaining land. Here he formed the acquaintanance of Joseph Russell, jr., at that time an opulent farmer, and owner of the most desirable portion of the land on which New Bedford now stands. The village having now begun to appear, it was deemed necessary, that it should be particularly distinguished from the rest of the old township; and, upon the suggestion of Joseph Rotch, the name of Bedford was given, in honor of Joseph Russell, jr., whose family name was the same as that of the Duke of Bedford in old England.

The first Friends meeting-house in New Bedford was built in 1785, and was located on the east side of Third street, between School and Walnut. This house being at length removed, the present edifice was built upon the site. The land, comprising nearly half an acre, was given them by Mr. Joseph Russell, jr., he being a member of the Society. The early business men, and many of the mechanics, were members of the society of Friends, and the present prosperity of New Bedford is largely indebted to their industry and enterprise.

To Mr. Russell, the founder, is attributed the honor of being the Pioneer of the whale fishery here, he having been engaged in the business as early as 1755. The ship Rebecca, Joseph Kersey, master, is said to have been the first American Whaler that doubled Cape Horn, and obtained a cargo of oil in the Pacific Ocean. She was owned by Joseph Russell & Sons, and Cornelius Howland. She sailed from New Bedford the 28th of September, 1791, and returned 23d February, 1793, with a full cargo of oil. The Rebecca was built in New Bedford by George Claghorn, and was launched in March, 1785. Col. Claghorn was also the builder of the United States frigate Constitution.

In 1801 the number of dwelling-houses in the village was one hundred and eighty-five. One meeting-house for Friends, one for Congregationalists, two large school-houses, an almshouse, and one small market house.

In 1805 there were belonging to New Bedford seventy-three ships and thirty-nine brigs. There were at this time seven wharves and seven ropewalks.

During the early part of the Revolution, it was thought necessary by the inhabitants that a fortress should be built to protect them from the depredations of British privateers, and a small fort was accordingly erected at the entrance of the harbor, on the east side of the river, upon the rocky prominence called by the native Indians Nobscot. It contained ten iron cannon of different calibers, namely: one eighteen pounder, three twelve pounders, five nine pounders, and one six pounder, mounted on garrison carriages. The garrison consisted of a captain, one lieutenant, several non-commissioned officers, and about twenty privates. It had sundry commanders during the interval between its erection and demolition.

A short time previous to the Revolution, Mr. Joseph Rotch (or his son, William Rotch, sen.), a wealthy merchant of this place, was concerned with Aaron Lopez, an eminent Jew of Newport, in a fleet of about fifteen sail, most of which was fitted out at New Bedford. These vessels were to assemble at the Falkland Islands, and thence pursue the whale-fishery. A part of the fleet was to be employed in taking the oil, the remainder in transporting it to London. Their intention was to have settled at Port Edmond, or to have made this their place of rendezvous; but the intervention of war frustrated the undertaking, and but one vessel of the entire fleet arrived at the destined port. The remainder was supposed to have been captured by British cruisers.

Previous to the war, a candle-house (the first in the place) was built by Mr. Joseph Russell; and Capt. Chafee, who had been engaged in manufacturing spermaceti in Lisbon, was employed by Mr. Russell at the sum of five hundred dollars per annum, which at that time was considered a large salary. This building was located near the corner of Centre and Front streets, and was burnt by the British during the general conflagration caused by them on the fifth of September, 1778. Among other property destroyed at this time were seven ships, one barque, one snow, eight brigs, seven schooners, and ten sloops, making thirty-four sail, also ten dwelling-houses, twenty shops, one blacksmith's shop, and one ropewalk.

By an act of incorporation, granted in 1796, a company was formed to build a bridge across the Acushnet River, to connect Bedford with Fairhaven and Oxford. The bridge, including the abutments and space taken up by the two islands which it crosses, is upwards of four thousand feet in length, and cost about thirty thousand dollars. This bridge so altered the current of the river, as to fill up the channel, and completely ruined the business of the place. However, in 1807 this bridge was washed away by a great tide, but was soon after reconstructed, only to be again destroyed in the gale of September, 1815. The present structure was built in 1819, and has been the source of much contention, on account of its having an injurious effect upon the harbor by filling up the channel, as also being a great obstacle to that portion of the business above the bridge.

About the time of the construction of the first bridge, a wooden lighthouse was built at Clark's Point. This lighthouse was burnt during a severe thunder-storm. It occupied the same spot where the present one stands.

In 1803, a bank was incorporated, with a capital of $60,000, styled the "Bedford Bank." The charter of this bank expired in 1812, and in consequence of the war with England, a new charter was not accepted, and it was determined to conclude the affairs of the institution. The following is a list of the officers of this bank, viz:

Thomas Hazard, President. John Howland, Cornelius Grinnell, William Rotch, jr., Thomas Nye, and others, Directors. John Pickens, Cashier.

The Bedford Marine Insurance Company was established in 1805, with a capital of $150,000. The following is a list of officers, viz:

Joseph Ricketson, President. Cornelius Grinnell, John H. Howland, William Ross, Thaddeus Swain, Stephen Hathaway, jr., and James Howland, Directors. Owing to great losses to this institution during the war, the operations were closed up on the twenty-third December, 1818. The date of the Charter was February 11th, 1805. Joseph Ricketson was its President during the whole time, at a salary of five hundred dollars per annum.

The first newspaper printed in New Bedford was printed and published by John Spooner, at his office near Rotch's wharf, and was called the Medley, or New Bedford Marine Journal; the first number was issued on Tuesday, November 27th, 1792. The following editorial is found in this number: "Here is an extensive country, situate remote from a Printing Press, its inhabitants numerous; but a small part of them knowing or being known in the transactions of the world, unless they advance a large extra sum for their knowledge. To instruct them in the ways of man at a much cheaper rate, and make each one who rightly improves the advantages arising from a weekly Gazette, as knowing as his fellow, etc., the Editor has undertaken a WEEKLY NEWSPAPER, and with this address introduceth for their inspection the first number of his Medley." He concluded with the following:—

"The Editor flatters himself that so long as his exertions tend to scatter the rays of knowledge, of morality, and of refinement among the people, the public will afford him every reasonable encouragement, in proportion to the utility of his exertions. JOHN SPOONER."

The successor of the Medley was the Columbian Courier, Abraham Sherman, jr., Printer and Publisher, at the Four Corners. (One dollar and fifty cents per annum.) This paper was issued December 8th, 1799, and continued till March 1st, 1805.

The New Bedford Mercury commenced February 7th, 1807, and is consequently now one of the oldest newspapers in New England.

In 1770, Joseph Russell and his son Barnabas, who were in partnership, owned, in addition to several whaling vessels, a number of others trading to Southern ports and the West Indies. They also kept a store, and imported goods from London by the way of Boston; and their West India goods by their own vessels up to the time of the Revolutionary War; their business was in a very flourishing state. During the war their vessels were taken, and their losses, by the depreciation of the continental paper-money, left them at its close little besides their real estate.

In 1774 there were fifty or sixty vessels, mostly sloops and schooners, employed in the whale fishery from Bedford, a great proportion of which were captured. It was several years after the peace before any vessels were again fitted out. In 1787–8 there was but one ship, and that of about one hundred and eighty tons, and two or three brigs, in the business; but soon after this period the whaling spirit revived, and with but little interruption has continued until the present time. In 1830 there were one hundred and twenty square-rigged vessels belonging to this port, the greater part of which were employed in the whale fishery. The quantity of oil imported during the year, 1830, was 41,144 barrels sperm, and 43,145 barrels whale oil. At this time there were ten spermaceti candle manufactories. The population was 7,695.

In 1795 the population of New Bedford was about 1,000. The only streets passable at this time were Main (now Union), Water, North, and parts of Second and Bridge (now Middle) streets.

The only place for vending marketable produce was a kind of shed with three arched entrances, painted or washed with a yellow ochre color. This shed, or one similar to it, formerly stood near the four corners. In those days of early rising, Wm. Rotch, sen., was frequently seen going to market with a lantern. In the rear of this market was a livery stable, at one time kept by Samuel Hussey, and afterwards by Ivory H. Bartlett. Here, and at Clapp's stable, most of the New Bedford people obtained their horses and carriages, very few except the wealthiest keeping either at that time. Here also wild beasts were exhibited. On the corner directly east the northeast corner of Seventh street was the residence of Samuel Hall, carriage builder, wheelwright, etc., and whose large sign, with a coach, chaise, etc., painted upon it, was placed upon the front of the house, the workshop being in the rear. Opposite was the residence of Joseph Ricketson, sen., and next below, that of Dr. Ebenezer Perry. The physicians of those days made their visits to their patients either on foot or on horseback, the luxury of wheeled carriages not being known to our older physicians.

On the twenty-third of September, 1815, one of the most disastrous gales in the History of New Bedford took place, the rage of which was terrific. Commencing in the early part of the day, with wind from the northeast, which soon hauled round into the southeast, blowing with increased violence, and bringing in the sea with a flood-tide, until it rose from ten to eleven feet higher than ever before known in the highest spring-tide, carrying, in a general destruction, the wharves, shipping, and the New Bedford and Fairhaven bridge. The tide rose above the bridge at Acushnet village, and reached into the mill-pond at the Paper Mill. In New Bedford the water rose beyond the buildings on Orange street, filling cellars and lower rooms. In the south part of Third street, boats could float. The following is a list of the principal casualties: The whole of the Salt Works at the south part of the town, with about one hundred bushels of salt, carried away (the property of Caleb Russell). The lower part of the wheel-house of Butler and Allen's rope walk, washed away, and about thirty fathoms of the walk, thrown down. Griffin Barney's rope walk, injured; William Rotch jr's. rope walk, nearly destroyed, and about sixty fathoms thrown down, and about twenty-five fathoms, with the wheel-house, containing about fourteen tons of hemp and a large quantity of cordage, carried away. Jonathan Card's Turning Mill nearly destroyed. William Coffin jr's. boat-builder's shop, thrown down. William Russell's shop and wood-house injured, and his barn capsized. Mr. Gerrish's dwelling-house much injured. Mr. Wilcox's blacksmith shop, and Mr. Cannon's tallow chandlery, carried away. Geo. Caswell's house greatly injured, and much of his furniture damaged and carried away. The store occupied by J. A. Parker, with about eight hundred bushels of corn and other property, destroyed. The large range of stores owned by William Rotch, on his wharf, moved twelve or fourteen feet from its foundation, the lower story entirely demolished, and the second story brought level with the ground; by which means Mr. Weston Howland, who occupied a part, lost seven hundred bushels of corn, and a quantity of flour. A large new store on A. Smith's wharf destroyed. Mr. Fuller's dwelling-house, principally thrown down and destroyed. A small house on Smith's wharf occupied by people of color, carried away. All the wharves much injured, and appeared to be nearly in ruins. The whole of the bridge between New Bedford and Fairhaven villages carried away, and also the bridge at the head of the river. The valuable Salt Works of Dr. S. Perry carried away. Some chimneys blown down, and many other buildings sustained more or less damage. There was scarcely a store on the wharves but had sustained some injury; among those most materially, not mentioned above, were Captain Hill's, James' and Perkins' and I. R. Heath's, and their contents nearly all destroyed; large quantities of goods in other stores were much damaged. So rapid was the rise of the tide that the occupants were obliged to quit their stores precipitately, leaving all to its fate; several lost even their account books and valuable papers. Shipping on shore: sloop Emily and schooner Mink of New Bedford, and Ann, of Dartmouth, thrown on Russell's wharf (now Central wharf); schooners William and Mary, and Morgiana, of New Bedford, and Minerva of Falmouth, sloops John Adams and Atalanta of New Bedford, and Industry of Sandwich, on Rotch's wharf; the latter upset and stove; ship Alexander, on J. Howland's wharf; ship Harpooner, and sloop Superior, of Nantucket, on Smith's wharf; Roderick Dhu, in the street below the post office; ship Augustus, on Fish Island; sloop Washington of Fairhaven, on shore, below Major Coggshall's.

But the loss of lives, though not numerous, was the most distressing consequence of this tornado. Temperance Perry, a young woman from Sandwich, who was on board a vessel bound for Newport, which came into New Bedford for a harbor, was drowned, notwithstanding all the exertions which could be made for her relief. Mr. William Macy, in his benevolent efforts to save a man, was drowned. Mr. Marmaduke Tinkham, his son, and two young men of Fairhaven, were all drowned.

The first Baptist minister who preached statedly in New Bedford was Peleg Burroughs, pastor of the first Baptist church in the then called Dartmouth church, now Tiverton. This church was formed in 1686, and its worthy pastors suffered much persecution from the unjust laws of clerical taxation in Massachusetts. One of them was imprisoned for nine months for refusing to give his cow, as that was necessary for his family's sustenance. Peleg Burroughs was ordained in 1780 over this church, and as some of the members lived in New Bedford, he visited and preached for several years at the house of Matthias Hathaway on the way, and at the house of George East. Quite a number of the members of this church united with the first Baptist church of New Bedford.

The earliest Literary Society in New Bedford was the Dialectic, formed in 1812. Wm. Sawyer Wall was the first President, and was succeeded by Abraham Sheerman and John Howland. At the first anniversary, John Mason Williams delivered an address, and Thomas A. Green a poem. They held their meetings at the Friends' Schoolhouse, then standing on Prospect Hill, near the spot now occupied by the "Bethel."

The "Fragment Society" was a charitable association, under the direction of ladies, in connection with which was a school for poor children, who were also supplied with clothing. These institutions were supplanted, the former by the Lyceum, and the latter by other charities, and the public schools.

The New Bedford Lyceum is one of the oldest institutions of the kind in this country. The first meeting was held November 19, 1828, Stephen Merrihew, Chairman, and Joseph Congdon, Secretary. The organization took place on the 8th December following. The Friends Academy, for many years the only classical institution in New Bedford, was founded by a number of the Society of Friends in 1810. The building which they occupied, stood originally upon the then outskirts of the village, and was one of its most prominent objects. The following donations from several liberal and highminded individuals readily betray the deep interest they felt in the cause of education: William Rotch, sen., the lot of land and $2,000; Wm. Rotch, jr., $5,000; Samuel Rodman, sen., $2,000; Samuel Elam, $1,000, and at his decease, in 1812, his rare and valuable library; Thomas Arnold, $500; James Arnold, son of the above, $1,000; Obadiah M. Brown, $536; Sam'l Rodman, jr. (1817), $1,000; Benj. Rodman (1820), $450; and a share in the Rhode Island bridge, $100; amounting to $13,586. Subsequent subscriptions for the purchase of a lot of land to enlarge the play-grounds in the rear, and enclosing the same, and for the erection of fixtures for a gymnasium; Charles W. Morgan, George Howland, sen., Thomas Rotch, and Joseph Rotch, $100 each; Joseph Ricketson and John Howland, jr., $50 each; Nathaniel Hathaway, William Swain and Thomas S. Swain, each $25: in all $575, — making the whole amount of subscriptions, $14,161. These sums comprise all the donations to the academy. The act of incorporation was granted February 29th, 1812. The original Board of Trustees were Wm. Rotch, sen., President; Elisha Thornton, 1st, Thomas Arnold, Samuel Elam, Samuel Rodman, sen., William Rotch, jr., and James Arnold. The Trustees were at this time required to be members of the Society of Friends. James Arnold was for several years the President. He was succeeded in 1836 by his son-in-law, William Rotch, jr., who was also Treasurer, holding both offices until the time of his decease, April 4th, 1850, at the age of ninety years. His successor was Samuel Rodman, jr., who still holds the office. The first Principal was John Brewer, who held the position for about six years, from 1811 to 1817. From December 1813, Thomas A. Greene was an assistant until the close of Mr. Brewer's term; and in September, 1817, the school was re-opened under the charge of Moses S. Moody and Mr. Greene. Mr. Moody, however, remaining but one year, Mr. Greene became the sole Principal, and was assisted by Joseph Congdon. Mr. Greene resigned March, 1820. On the death of Thomas Arnold, in 1826, Mr. Greene was chosen to fill the vacancy in the Board of Trustees. From the time of Mr. Greene's resignation, in the spring of 1820, the academy was closed until the spring of 1824. During the interval, the windows were boarded up, and the library removed to the "stone store" of Samuel Rodman, sen. Standing as it did, in an isolated place, the academy obtained the reputation of being haunted. Early in the spring of 1824, the boards were removed from the windows, the accumulated dust and cobwebs removed, and in the month of March the school was again commenced; George Newell, a graduate of Harvard University, the teacher, who so continued for two years. During the summer term of 1826, Charles Babbage was instructor. He was succeeded at the fall term of the same year by John H. W. Page, who continued as Principal until the spring of 1829. William H. Sanford succeeded Mr. Page as Principal, and held that station two years. In 1831 William M. Holland became the Principal, but resigned in a few months, having received an appointment as a professor in Washington College, Hartford, Conn. David Mack was his successor in the winter of 1831–32, who resigned on account of ill health in 1835. Isaac M. Stoddard succeeded Mr. Mack in 1835, and resigned in 1837. In June of the same year, John V. Beane became Principal, and held the position for eight years. In October 1845 Mr. Beane resigned, and was succeeded by Simon Barrows, who resigned in June, 1846. The academy was then taken for one year by Misses Caroline and Deborah Weston, accomplished and successful teachers. In the summer of 1847, the trustees invited Abner J. Phipps, at that time and for several years previously a teacher in Phillips Academy, Andover, to become Principal, who continued at the head of both departments until their separation in 1855, when the male department was continued to him, and the female to Edward A. H. Allen. Mr. Phipps is a graduate of Dartmouth College, and has been one of the Board of Overseers of Harvard University.

The population of New Bedford in 1790 was about 700. In 1796, the whole population of the township which then included Fairhaven, was but 3,313. By the census of 1820, the population was 3,947; in 1830, 7,592; in 1836, 11,113; in 1855, 20,389; and in 1865, 20,853.

New Bedford was made a city in 1847.*

NORTON.

About 1637 Henry Uxley and some thirty-five others purchased of the Plymouth Colony a tract of land, at a place called Cohannett, which soon took the name of Taunton. This locality is now called Norton.

By order of the Court, the bounds around this first purchase (sometimes called the "Tetiquett Purchase," to distinguish it from subsequent purchases), were made on the 19th June, 1640, by Miles Standish and John Brown. This tract of land, which was laid out in a long square, measuring eight miles on a side, included within its limits the present towns of Mansfield, Norton, Raynham, Berkley and Taunton. The town, as originally constituted, comprised the whole of the "North Purchase," so-called, together with the northerly angle of the original, or Tetiquett Purchase, of Taunton.

The first settlement within the present limits of Norton is believed to have been made by Mr. William Wetherell, in 1669, on the easterly side of Winniconnet Pond, about twenty rods northerly from the bridge, over the outlet of the pond, which marks the bounds between the present towns of Taunton and Norton. On the 6th December, 1695, Thomas Leonard, sen., and James Leonard, sen., received a deed from the proprietors of the North Purchase of two hundred acres of land at Stony Brook, on the west side of Cowasset River, to set up and build a forge to make iron at said place; and it was to be built, and in some considerable state of forwardness, before December 1, 1696, or the grant of land was to be null and void. To these Leonards was also given the liberty to take their next division of one share in the North-Purchase lands "in the best iron ore that they could find." They were also allowed to dig ore on any other man's land, for the use and benefit of said works, by paying the owner of such land "one shilling a ton for every ton of iron ore they shall dig." George Leonard, the son of Thomas and nephew of James Leonard, to whom this grant was made (probably as their agent), set up a forge or "bloomery," as it was called, at the place named, which was in front of the site of the old Leonard family mansion; and the establishment of this iron forge, together with the energy and business tact of young George Leonard, soon gave new life and vitality to this neighborhood.

His son George, and grandson George, carried on the business of smelting the ore and the manufacture of iron at this place, till near the close of the last century. For many years a great amount of business was done here by the enterprising Leonard family. The late Judge Leonard built a Grist Mill, nearly on the site of the old forge, in 1805. It continued in operation till 1825. Mr. George L. Barnes (a descendant of Major George Leonard), who at the death of Mrs. Bowen came into possession of the Leonard homestead, erected in 1855, at great expense, a saw and shingle mill, near the site of the old forge. He occupied the mill about a year; and since then, till January 1859, it stood idle, most of the machinery having been taken out.

March 17, 1710–11, an order was passed by the Council and Assembly, respectively, on the petition of the North Precinct of Taunton, praying to be made a town, having the consent of Taunton therefor. The language is as follows: "That the North Precinct of Taunton be, and hereby is granted to be a town distinct from the town of Taunton, by the name of 'Norton,' and shall have and enjoy the powers, immunities and privileges by law granted to the townships; and that a bill be projected and brought in at the next session of the Court, fully to perfect said grant, provided that the east end of the North Purchase shall have half the said purchase as their precinct when they are able to maintain a minister, and this Court judge them so. "Consented to,

"J. DUDLEY."

Norton is about twenty-eight miles south of Boston, nearly the same distance northerly of New Bedford, and eighteen miles northeasterly from Providence, R. I.

It has four villages. The centre is the largest. Population 1,709.

The principal manufactures are cotton goods, hollow-ware and castings, matches and lumber.

Copper Works Village is about two miles southeasterly of the centre. Winniconnet Village, near where the first settlement was made, is three miles east from the centre.

The only pond is the Winniconnet, in the southeastern part of the town, on the shores of which was erected the first civilized habitation within the limits of the town.

This beautiful sheet of water embraces an area of about a hundred and twenty-five acres, and abounds in fine pickerel and other fish. Rumford River, sometimes called in the old records "Ten Mile River," rises in the westerly part of Sharon and runs through the central part of Norton. There are several other streams passing through the town, some of which abound in pickerel, perch, hornpouts and other specimens of the finny tribe.

Great Rocky Hill is situated a short distance northeasterly of Winniconnet Pond, and easterly of Mulberry Meadow Brook.

Ann Cobb's Bridge is over Wading River, southerly of the Common, at the upper end of Barrowsville Factory Pond. It took its name from Ann Cobb, who once lived near it and was reputed to be a witch.

The surface of the town is very even, and is one of the flattest of its size in the State, there being scarcely any eminence that can be dignified by the name of hill. The soil is not of the first quality, being for the most part quite sandy; yet on the whole is capable of being made quite productive by proper cultivation, being well adapted to the raising of most kinds of grain. Iron ore was formerly dug in large quantities in various parts of the town, and its yield is not yet discontinued. In the northerly part of the town, bordering on Mansfield, anthracite coal has been dug, but it exists in such small quantities and is of such poor quality that it does not pay for digging. Clay is to be found between Rumford River and the depot, and bricks were once made there.

On Great Rocky Hill is a cave, formed by the projection of one very large rock over another, with a perpendicular side, producing at the top an acute angle, about five feet from the ground, with an area at the base of about fifteen feet by nine, and open at both ends: this cave of itself is a great curiosity, but has become famous from the tradition that it was once a noted retreat of King Philip when on fishing excursions to Winniconnet Pond; hence it is known to this day as "Philip's Cave."

January 18, 1709–10, a tax-bill of forty-two pounds was made for the erection of a meeting-house, and placed in the hands of Constable Samuel Hodges for collection. This house was probably erected early in the spring of 1710, on the site designated by the Court's Committee. It is said to have stood "about ten feet" to the east of the second meeting-house. The house was not completely finished for some years after it was erected.

October 24, 1715, the committee, that were appointed to seat the meeting-house, made their report to the town that they had "seeted the inhabitants of the town in the meeting-house."

June 20, 1723, it was "voted that the selectmen should lay out the town's part of the interest money granted towards the finishing of the meeting-house, and that they should lay it out in lathing, and plastering, and mending the glass, some time in the coming fall.

In 1752 a new meeting-house was built, and Mr. William Coddington was chosen to be carpenter to frame said meeting-house. This house seems to have been a great many years in an unfinished state, as there were votes passed from time to time for additions and alterations as late as March 30th, 1810, when a bell was purchased of Paul Revere and Son, weighing eight hundred and thirty-five pounds net, at a cost of $373.80. The steeple and belfry were erected in 1804.

In 1818, a subscription paper was started, headed by the venerable Judge Leonard, then nearly ninety years of age, to purchase stoves for the meeting-house.

On the 21st June, 1819, three hundred dollars were appropriated by the parish to paint and repair the meeting-house and belfry. During the summer of 1835 another meeting-house was built, in part after the plan of a house at Ipswich. This house was dedicated December 23d, 1835.

November 16, 1835, the parish voted to have the old meeting-house appraised by a disinterested committee, and to sell it at public vendue; and it was subsequently sold to the town for a town-house.

The first recorded action of the town relative to schools was April 28, 1719, when Mr. Thomas Skinner, sen., was chosen to be schoolmaster for one quarter, and his salary not to exceed two pounds for said quarter. It is probable that some private instruction had been given previous to this date. For some years after the establishment of public schools, the town, in its corporate capacity, chose the schoolmaster. In some instances, however, it delegated power to the selectmen to contract with the teacher, and make the necessary arrangements for the opening of the school; yet, for more than eighty years after the organization of the town, there were no school-houses, especially erected for that purpose. The early settlers felt themselves too poor, and had too many difficulties and obstacles to contend with, to furnish the means or find the time to erect separate houses for the instruction of the young. In very many instances, they were obliged to kill two birds with one stone. Hence private houses, carpenters' shops, etc., were more or less used for school purposes. Most of the early schools were established for boys, it being thought almost entirely unnecessary that girls should be educated. As they were not expected to cast interest or engage largely in any business transactions, it was not deemed important that they should be sent to school. Their husbands, if they had any, were considered the proper guardians of their interests; and therefore, if they learned anything, it must be in patience and meekness of their husbands at home. Hence for many years after public schools were established, there were no female teachers; of course, if they knew nothing themselves, they could teach nothing to others.

The first female teacher or "schoolmistress" seems to have been employed in 1791, when an order was drawn to pay Patience Leach for teaching eight weeks, at three shillings per week. Jonathan Hunt boarded the schoolmistress that year eight weeks, at three shillings per week. The board of male teachers between the years of 1719 and 1800, ranged from four to sixteen shillings per week; the latter amount no doubt being paid when the currency was somewhat depreciated. As the population of the town was at first quite sparse, it is highly probable that there were but few children within its limits, — possibly not more than enough for one good school if all could have been collected into one room. But as all could not attend at one place, the school was kept from time to time in different parts of the town so as to better accommodate all.

The first schoolhouse in District No. 1 was built in the Centre District, in 1817, by Mr. Zebulon White, and cost upwards of two hundred dollars. For some years the school was kept in an old dwelling-house which stood on the easterly side of the road between the house of H. H. Wetherell, Esq., and the old Parsonage House. After the Free-masons' Lodge was established, the room under their hall was used for some years for school purposes, till the house above alluded to was built. This school-house stood till 1847, when it was torn down, and incorporated into the new house built that year, which is still used for school purposes, and stands a few feet farther back from the road than the first house. In District No. 2 a school-house was erected by the late Judge George Leonard at his own expense, and this is thought by some to have been the first house erected in town. It stood for some years about twenty-five or thirty rods easterly of Wading River, on the southerly side of the road, between Judge Leonard's house and the house now occupied and owned by Mr. Stillman A. Wetherell. Some trouble arose between Judge Leonard and the district, relative to the house, and the Judge caused it to be removed, and it now forms the L of the above-named Wetherell house. In 1819, the frame of a house was erected in the corner of Judge Leonard's lot, nearly opposite to the house now occupied by William Lane. There was some misunderstanding relative to the land, between the owner and the district, and the frame was soon removed to where it now stands. It is supposed, however, that it was not so far completed as to be occupied as a school-room till 1821.

The first school-house in District No. 3 was erected for the district by George Hodges, in 1801, within a few feet of where the present house stands. It was rough and unique in many respects. It had but one aisle, and two rows of long benches upon either side; a desk in one corner; a dark closet for the girls' bonnets; and a huge fire-place with a cumbrous chimney. This house was removed and converted into a dwelling-house in 1837, and a new and more commodious building built upon the site. Henry Gilmore of Raynham, taught the first school in this house in the winter of 1837–8. The present house was erected late in the autumn of 1854, and with its appurtenances cost something more than two thousand dollars.

The first school-house for District No. 4 was erected by Mr. Joseph Hodges in 1801, and probably cost a little short of two hundred dollars. This house stood at first a few rods northerly, and on the opposite side of the road from where Mr. Benjamin Richmond now lives. In 1838 it was removed to the four corners on the other side of Mr. Richmond's house. It was occupied for school purposes till 1853, when the new house was erected, at an expense including land of about eleven hundred dollars.

From the town records, it appears that a school-house was standing August 1799, in the fifth district, near where Mr. Seth Smith now resides. Probably this house was built before the one in District No. 2 by Judge Leonard. This was a square building, with a four-sided cap roof, with a chimney standing in one corner. It was removed to its present location in 1802. It remained for about one year after its removal in an unfinished state, and then another house was built for the district by Mr. Joseph Hunt. It stood a few rods northerly from where the present house is located. Fifteen or twenty years since, it was moved on to the site of the present house, and was there burned on the night of March 14th, 1854. The present house was erected the same year, at a cost of six hundred dollars.

It is thought that a school-house was erected in District No. 6 in 1799 or 1800. It was moved back from the road, an addition made to it, thoroughly repaired, and modernized to some extent, in 1843. It is still used for school purposes, though much changed for the better, both in its interior and exterior appearance, from what it originally was.

In 1801, a school-house was built in District No. 7. It stood till December 1854, when it was torn down, and incorporated into a new school-house erected January 1855, which stands a few feet farther from the road, directly back of where the old house stood. It cost a little less than six hundred dollars.

The old house in District No. 8 is thought to have been built previous to 1800. It stood a few rods westerly on the opposite side of the road from where the present house stands. The new house was erected in 1853.

It is believed that most of the town meetings, from the organization of the town till the Town House was built, in 1843, were held in the "Publick meeting-house," either in the south or north Precinct, but principally at the former.

The first warrant for a town meeting recorded in the town books, bears date of February 20th, 1718–19, and the meeting-house was the place where the voters were to assemble. Occasionally the meetings were adjourned to a private dwelling-house, probably on account of the meeting-house having no means of warming it. The town clerk in 1711 was John Briggs. George Leonard, from 1711 to 1716, and from 1721 to 1730, also from 1743 to 1751, inclusive. John Hodges, from 1717 to 1720, inclusive, and also from 1731 to 1742, inclusive. David Williams, from 1752 to 1772, inclusive. John King, 1773 to 1778, inclusive. Capt. Silas Cobb, 1779 to 1784, inclusive. Seth Smith, jr., from 1785 to 1793, inclusive; also, 1795 to 1798, inclusive. Thomas Fobes, in 1794. Joseph Hunt, from 1799 to 1813, inclusive. George Walker, from 1814 to 1820, inclusive.

There was a saw mill on Mulberry Meadow Brook, as early as 1710, owned by James Leonard, jr., and John Austin. In 1746, and for some years subsequently, it was owned by Samuel Clapp, and afterwards by his son, Jonathan Clapp; but previous to 1771, it passed into the hands of John Cook and Samuel Godfrey. About 1719, the mill was burned; it was then owned by James Godfrey, and was soon rebuilt by him.

As early as 1714, there was a "corn mill" owned by George Leonard on Wading River, at what is now Barrowsville. It had then probably stood several years, and, no doubt, was the first grist mill erected in town; and probably for many years it was the only one. On the death of Mr. Leonard in 1716, he devised this privilege to his son Nathaniel, afterwards minister at Plymouth; and it remained in his possession till his death in 1761. There was then a grist mill and saw mill, which were given to his son George.

In 1810, Mr. Ephraim Raymond and his father-in-law (Josiah Dean, of Raynham) erected the cotton factory now standing. About 1792, Daniel Smith, Laban Smith and William Story built a mill on the easterly side of the river, for cutting nails, a few rods below the bridge, near which the forge and saw mill were first erected. This nail mill was burned some ten or fifteen years after its erection. Daniel Smith rebuilt it for the same purpose. It has since been used for sawing shingles and for making cotton batting. Mr. Smith built a saw mill in 1822, some twenty rods below where the nail mill stood. This saw mill was repaired, and the dam rebuilt in 1857, by Daniel S. Cobb, Esq., who, by the death of his uncle, Mr. Daniel Smith, came into possession of the privilege. In 1817, a clothier's shop was built on the opposite side of the river from the saw mill, by Sampson Patten. It was afterwards occupied by Pliny Puffer and Stillman Smith for the manufacture of shuttles, and subsequently of cotton batting; and was destroyed by fire in January 1840.

About 1730, William Makepeace erected a grist mill on Canoe River. This mill was rebuilt about 1751 or 52, by Peter Makepeace, son of William. Not far from 1770 George Makepeace built an iron forge, just below and on the opposite side of the road from where the grist and saw mills now stand. Peter Makepeace also had a slitting mill in a part of, or adjoining the forge building. This privilege passed into the hands and ownership of Lysander Makepeace in 1792.

In 1811, another cotton factory was built and went into operation, and Mr. Thomas W. Bicknell was the first agent of the company, who with Daniel Patten, Daniel Shepard and Benjamin Blanding were the originators and builders of the factory, which was built upon land purchased of Lysander Makepeace. They made cotton cloth and yarn about eighteen years; then the factory passed into the hands of Daniel Patten and Mason Stone; and in a few years was owned by Mr. Stone alone. In October, 1851, Mr. Stone sold it to Eddy Lincoln and Hiram J. Hunt; and soon after Mr. Hunt sold his right to Mr. Lincoln. August 28, 1824, Deacon Makepeace sold the saw mill and grist mill to the Norton Cotton Mills Company; which at that time consisted of himself, Daniel Shepard, Lemuel Perry, Jacob Shepard, Simeon Blanding, Benjamin Blanding, Daniel Patten and Ichabod Perry. With the factory, they passed into the hands of Mason Stone; and March 26, 1845, together with the shingle mill that had been built a few years previously, they were purchased by Mr. Eddy Lincoln.

It is supposed that a saw mill was built by Major Joseph Hodges, on Crooked Meadow Cedar Swamp Brook, previous to 1745. This mill it would seem was rebuilt or repaired in 1753 or 4 by three of his sons and their cousin Ephraim. In 1744 there were standing an iron forge and a saw mill on Rumford River, near the residence of the late Deacon Daniel Lane; the forge seems to have belonged to Ebenezer Burt, and the saw mill to himself and William Bassett Some time prior to 1800 a grist mill was erected which stood a few feet easterly of where the factory now stands. More than fifty years ago Deacon Lane, or rather the Lane brothers, came into possession of this water privilege; and, 1811 or 12, they rebuilt the saw-mill on the site of the old one. In 1828 a company was formed, and the cotton factory or "Centre Mills" were built by Daniel Patten, Lemuel Perry, John and David Arnold, Simeon Derry, Deacon David Lane and Sons; and the building of the factory destroyed the saw mill privilege. In 1846, the factory passed into the hands of Laban M. Wheaton, Esq., and the mills have been running but little since. The present grist mill was built in 1846.

Previous to 1745 Jonathan Hodges erected a mill on Goose Brook, a few rods below the bridge, and carried on the business of "Fulling, Dyeing, and Dressing Cloth." This was the first mill for that business erected in Norton. Soon after the mill was erected it was removed about thirty-five rods further down the stream, where the business was continued by Mr. Hodges until about 1784; when his son, Jonathan Hodges, jr., assumed the business and carried it on alone (with the exception of one or two years when he had a partner) till 1814 — the time of his death. In 1846 David and George H. Arnold erected the building now standing by the bridge, and for some years made cotton batting. It is now used as a shingle mill.

More than a hundred years ago, a saw mill was built by Deacon John Andrews on Burt's Brook, about eighty rods above the site of the present mill. A carding mill was started there in 1814. The present building below the road, used as a shingle mill, etc., was erected in 1817, and for some years used for the carding of wool, etc. A machine for sawing shingles was put into it in 1826. The furnace for casting iron, etc., was built by Annes A. Lincoln, jr., & Company, for the same purpose.

About a hundred years ago, a saw mill was built on Dora's Brook, by Mr. Samuel Hunt. It was in ruins more than fifty years since. Hiram J. Hunt built a shop on the same spot about 1843, where he had a turning lathe, and sawed wagon felloes. It was occupied only six or seven years.

Previous to 1761, a grist and saw mill were erected on Wading River, by Rev. Nathaniel Leonard. At his death, he gave his half part of these "new mills," as he calls them, to his son Thomas, together with all his land there, on the west side of the river up to the road by Goose Bridge. Thomas Leonard died in a few years, and his part of the property passed into the hands of the late Judge George Leonard. Col. George Leonard, at his death, in 1778, devised his part of the estate to his daughter, Mrs. Anna Chandler, who sold her half of the mills and two hundred and thirty-two acres of land, etc., to Josiah Dean, on the 25th of December, 1792. These mills finally ran down, and stood idle for several years. November 18, 1820, the Lane Brothers (Ephraim, William, Daniel, George, Allen, and Calvin) bought of Raymond and the executors of Mr. Dean their shares of the mills, and rebuilt them; giving Mrs. Bowen, who had by the recent death of her father (Judge Leonard) come into possession of the other half, one-fourth the income till the mills were paid for. In May 1835, the entire privilege and appurtenances were sold to William A. and Samuel L. Crocker, who wanted to carry the water by canal to their copper-works establishment, about three-fourths of a mile below. About 1845, the mill buildings were taken down, and the water still goes to the copper works by canal.

On the 30th of August 1783, Nathan and Edward Babbit of one party, and Annes Newcomb of the other, entered into an agreement to build a dam for a grist mill and fulling mill. The Babbits to build one-fourth of the dam and one-half of the grist mill, and Newcomb to build the other half of the dam and the whole of the fulling-mill. The buildings were soon after erected on Canal River, on opposite sides of the stream, a short distance from Easton Line, between where Nathaniel Newcomb's factory now stands, and the saw mill. On the 18th of November 1794, Nathan Babbit being dead, his son Edward deeded to Levi Babbit one-half of the grist mill, the other half being then owned by Asa Newcomb.

Not far from 1790, William Carpenter built a mill for cutting nails, on the westerly side of Rumford River. By a freshet in 1806, the dam was carried away and the mill partially removed from its foundation; so that it was never after used as a cutting mill, and was subsequently removed from the spot.

In the year 1796, Benjamin Horton built a slitting mill on Wading River, at what is now called the Copper Works Village, on the spot where the Cupola Smelting Furnace now stands, adjoining the bridge. This building was burned the fore-part of the year 1824. Mr. Horton had also a mill for cutting nails on the opposite side of the river, which was burned some years previous to the slitting mill. Crocker & Richmond erected the Cupola Furnace building in 1825, for the copper-rolling mill. The same year they erected the building back of the furnace for a copper-refining furnace. It is now used as a yellow-metal furnace. In these two buildings the company carried on the copper business till 1835. In that year the Crocker Brothers dug the canal from the mill-pond by Allen and Augustus Lane's, and erected what is called the Lower Mills, on the northerly side of the river, which is operated by the water from the canal. In 1838, they added the upper or zinc mill; all of which, for some years were owned and carried on by Messrs. Crocker Brothers & Company, of Taunton. During the year 1857 they put on an addition to the Cupola Smelting Furnace for the purpose of condensing the oxide of zinc escaping from the furnace, which previously passed off through the chimney into the atmosphere, in the form of vapor or smoke. It has proved to be a valuable improvement, not only for getting rid of the nuisance, but also in a pecuniary point of view; for, on an average, more than fifty dollars' worth of the powder is saved daily when the furnace is in operation, and is used in painting, though not quite so clear and white as lead. Mr. William A. West, about the year 1837, in one of these buildings, commenced making cents for the United States Government, or rather he prepared them for coining, and then sent them to the mint for that purpose. He continued to manufacture them till the issue of the new and smaller cent, and on an average he made about sixty tons per year.

RAYNHAM.

Was purchased in 1637, by Mrs. Elizabeth Pool, a noble Christian lady formerly of Taunton, for and in behalf of the town of Taunton, the purchase being made from the Tetiquett tribes of Indians, living on the Taunton River. The Tetiquett purchase included the present towns of Taunton, Raynham & Berkley. Raynham was a part of Taunton till 1731. The Indian name was Hockamock. The first minister was John Wales, settled in 1731 and died in 1765. James and Henry Leonard, brothers, from England, established here the first forge in America, in 1652.

Raynham Town Officers.

REHOBOTH.

The first purchase of land for this town was made in 1641. A company, headed by Rev. Samuel Newman, came from Weymouth, Mass., in 1643, and purchased a large tract of land of Massasoit, the Sachem of Pokanoket, including what now constitutes Rehoboth, Seekonk, Pawtucket* and a part of Swansea, then called Wannamoisett. In the spring of the following year (1644), they removed to a place then called by the Indian name, Seekonk, and began a settlement around the Great Plain.

In June 1645, they were taken into the jurisdiction of Plymouth Colony, and incorporated as a township by the name of Rehoboth. The third purchase was the "North Purchase," forming now Attleborough, Mass., and Cumberland, R. I. In 1667, Wannamoisett was a part of Swansea, which then being made a separate town, including what is now Somerset, Mass., and Barrington, R. I., also a large part of Warren, R. I. The rest of the old town of Rehoboth continued together till 1812, when Seekonk was set off. In 1828 Seekonk was divided, and a part of it was separated and called Pawtucket.

The first settler was William Blackstone. His place of residence was on Blackstone river, in the present town of Cumberland, R. I.

* Daggett's History of Attleborough, and Bliss's History of Rehoboth.

The founder of Rehoboth is said to have been Rev. Samuel Newman, who was born in England in 1600, and educated at Oxford University. He wrote a concordance of the Bible, which was superior to any previous work of the kind. His death occurred July 5, 1663.

The first meeting of the original planters of Rehoboth is recorded to have been on the 24th October, 1643. It is called a meeting of the planters of Seekonk.

In 1645 they acknowledged themselves within the jurisdiction of Plymouth Court, and were incorporated by the name of Rehoboth, a name selected by Rev. Mr. Newman from the Bible.

At a town meeting held in October 1646, it was agreed to raise a tax to get the town out of debt, and also to build a meeting-house. At the same time it was agreed that whosoever should kill a wolf or wolves, he should have twenty shillings for every wolf, and the money should be levied upon the heads of beasts, geese and hogs.

Nov. 29, 1658, the Indians were forbidden to set their traps within the bounds of the town. Jan. 30, 1659, voted to agree with Richard Bullock, to perform the office of Town Clerk; to give him sixteen shillings a year, he to be paid for births, burials, and marriages besides.

On the 5th of July, 1663, Rev. Samuel Newman, the Pastor, suddenly expired in a peculiar manner. He had a certain premonition of it, and seemed to triumph in the prospect of its being near. He was apparently in perfect health, and preached a sermon from these words, Job xiv., 14: "All these days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come." In the afternoon of the following Lord's Day, he asked the Deacon to pray with him, saying he had not long to live. As soon as he had finished his prayer, he said the time was come that he must leave this world. But his friends, seeing no immediate signs of dissolution, thought it was the influence of imagination. But he turned round, saying, "Angel, do your office," and immediately expired. He was born at Banbury (Oxfordshire), England, in 1600. At the age of sixteen, he entered the University at Oxford, where he received his education. He commenced his ministry in England; but being a Puritan, the molestations of the Episcopal clergy compelled him to no less than seven removes in his own country, and finally to his eighth and last remove, to America. He came to New England in 1636 or 1638. He spent some time at Dorchester; removed to Weymouth in 1639, where he preached about four or five years; and thence at the close of 1643 or the commencement of 1644, emigrated with a majority of his congregation to Rehoboth, where he passed the remainder of his life.

The Indian War (King Philip's) commenced in 1675

and Rehoboth from its proximity to Mount Hope, the residence of Philip, or Pometacom, the prime mover of the war, was destined to suffer its full share. The first blood was spilled within the original jurisdiction of this town; and the last of Philip's generals, the stern and intrepid old warrior and counsellor Annawan, was captured within its present limits. During this war, which lasted about two years, the inhabitants of Rehoboth were kept in almost constant alarm; a number of them were at different times slain, and the whole town, the garrison houses excepted, was at one time laid in ashes. This town was also the scene of Pierce's Fight, one of the most disastrous battles to the English that occurred during the whole war. The events of the war, so far as connected with Rehoboth, occupy a prominent place in the hardships, dangers, and sufferings of the early settlers of the town. During the life of the "good old Massasoit," the relations between the English and the Indians of Pokanoket were pacific, and their intercourse was usually amicable and friendly. His death is believed to have occurred in the winter of 1661–2. He was succeeded by his eldest son Alexander, and he died the same year with his father. Philip, alias Pometacom, the second son of the benevolent old sachem, became by the order of succession chief of the Wampanoags. Things for a while wore a pacific aspect, though it is evident that from his accession Philip cherished feelings of jealousy, and hostility towards his English neighbors, and that, sensible of their growing power and the decrease of the Indians, and seeing the inevitable fate that awaited him and his people, should the English be left to spread themselves thus unmolested, he determined to make one desperate effort to free himself and his country by a war of utter extermination.

April 16, 1678, the Rev. Noah Newman, the second minister of Reboboth died, having filled the sacred office from 1668 till the commencement of his illness, which terminated with his death. He is supposed to have been interred in the old burying-ground near the Congregational meeting-house in Seekonk, though there is no stone to mark the spot.

September 12, 1715, the town voted to build a new meeting-house, to be fifty feet in length and forty feet in breadth, and twenty-five feet between joists; the town to pay towards it two hundred and fifty pounds. It was voted that the new house should be located near the site of the old one.

June 20, 1678, it was unanimously agreed that Mr. Angier should have forty pounds a year for his encouragement, in his diet; and ten pounds of the forty in money, if God incline his heart to settle amongst us in the work of the ministry.

September 11, 1693, it was voted that there should be a letter, written to the Rev. Mr. Angier, that they might know his mind about his return.

This letter was answered by Mr. Angier in person; and despairing of the recovery of his health so as to be able to resume his duties, he took his leave of his church and people, recommending to them the Rev. Thomas Greenwood as a suitable person to fill the station which he regretted to be obliged to resign.

Having regained his health, Mr. Angier was chosen on the 28th of August 1696, by the church in that part of ancient Watertown which is now Waltham, to be their pastor; and on the 21st of September following, the town concurred in the choice, and he was installed pastor of Watertown on the 25th of May, 1697. Here, after an eminent and successful ministry, he died, January 21, 1719, aged sixty-five.

Mr. Thomas Greenwood was settled as the minister of Rehoboth, in October 1693, continuing as its pastor until his death, which occurred on the 8th of September, 1720, at the age of fifty years. Mr. Greenwood was a native of Weymouth, Mass., graduated at Cambridge in 1690, and was married December 28, 1693, and came to Rehoboth to reside on the Tuesday following.

November 29, 1721, the new meeting-house at Palmer's River being finished, a church was gathered here, and the Rev. David Turner, of Scituate, ordained their minister.

June 10, 1728, the Rev. John Greenwood and the Rev. David Turner presented a petition to the town for an increase of their salaries, which was granted by the addition of twenty pounds to that of Mr. Greenwood, and thirty pounds to that of Mr. Turner, making the salary of each one hundred pounds.

March 31, 1729, it was proposed for the town's consideration, whether it might not be proper to build a house for the entertainment of such poor people as are, or shall be, destitute of a house to dwell in. It was voted to adjourn or defer the matter till the next general meeting.

In the year 1734, the town expended sixty pounds for the support of the schools.

March 29, 1736. Voted to build a work-house for the poor of the town.

In 1741, a highway two rods wide was laid out by the town, "from Pawtucket Falls to the line between Rehoboth and Attleborough, into the county road leading towards Mendon," which had been laid out on the third or fourth of October, 1684.

November 14, 1720, the church made choice of the Rev. John Greenwood to preach the gospel amongst them for the present.

In 1757, Mr. Greenwood was obliged in consequence of ill-health to resign his pastoral charge, and at the request of the town relinquished his claim to the profits of the ministerial lands, on condition of the church, or town, or individuals becoming responsible for the payment of twenty pounds to him yearly during his life. Mr.Greenwood died December 1, 1766, having lived in Rehoboth between forty-five and forty-six years, aged sixty-nine years six months.

Mr. Greenwood was succeeded in the ministry by the Rev. John Carnes, a native of Boston, and former minister of Stoneham. He was installed over the First Congregationalist Church, April 18, 1759, and was dismissed by request, June 28, 1763.

May 14, 1766, Rev. Ephraim Hyde was ordained over the same church in place of Rev. John Carnes. Mr. Carnes died at Lynn, October 12, 1802, aged 78.

May 26, 1775, voted to raise two companies to be ready on special alarm; one company to be raised in the westerly part, and the other in the easterly part of the town. Likewise voted, that every soldier, enlisted to be a minute man, on alarm, shall have three shillings a day, he finding himself, if called into service, until they come to draw provisions out of the provision stores; and then to have two shillings a day, for each day until they return home again, except they be paid by the Province. Also voted, that the selectmen divide the town stock of ammunition, the one half for the west part of the town, the other half for the east part.

No Town Clerk is named in the town records prior to 1651, when Mr. Peter Hunt was chosen to the office. But previous to this time the records appear to have been written by the same hand; and from various returns made by the Town Clerk, and on record at Plymouth, that the first who filled that office in Rehoboth was Mr. William Carpenter, and that he retained it from the date of the commencement of the town records in October, 1643, till 1649, when Mr. Hunt was probably chosen. Richard Bowen was chosen Town Clerk in September, 1654; Richard Bullock, in January, 1659, and agreed to perform the office for "sixteen shillings a year, and to be paid for births, burials and marriages, besides." William Carpenter (probably son of William Carpenter who served first), was chosen Town Clerk in May, 1668, and served, with the exception of 1693, when Stephen Paine supplied his place, till March, 1703. Daniel Carpenter was chosen in 1703, and held the office three years. In March, 1706, Daniel Smith was chosen, and in March, 1708, Daniel Carpenter was again chosen, and continued to fill the office till 1730. In 1730, Ezekiel Read was chosen, and continued in the office, with the exception of 1751, 1752 and 1753, till 1762. In March, 1762, Jesse Perrin was chosen, and continued till 1787. In March, 1787, Lieut. (afterwards Capt.) Philip Walker was chosen Town Clerk, and filled the office till 1801, when Capt. Caleb Abell was chosen, and continued till the division of the town in 1812, when he fell within the limits of Seekonk. In 1812, James Blanding, Esq., was chosen Town Clerk of Rehoboth.

SEEKONK.

In 1812 the west part of Rehoboth was, by an act of the Legislature, incorporated into a distinct township, resuming its ancient Indian name, Seekonk. The name is composed of two Indian words, seaki, meaning black, and honk, goose, — black goose, the Indian name for the wild goose, which is partly black.

A warrant was issued February 26, 1812, and a meeting of the legal voters of Seekonk was holden in the old meeting-house on Monday, March 16, 1812, for organizing the town and choosing town officers. Caleb Abell was chosen Moderator of the meeting and Town Clerk for the ensuing year, and Capt. Allen Cole, Town Treasurer for the year. April 5, 1313, "Voted to put out the poor persons belonging to the town of Seekonk at auction, to the lowest bidder."

June 7, 1813, it was voted to grant the sum of $1,000 for the purpose of building the town-house. The sum of three hundred and fifty dollars was appropriated for the support of schools.

Oct. 3, 1814, a committee of the town of Providence, consisting of Messrs. Tristram Burgess, William Church and Richmond Bullock, in behalf of said town, requested liberty to build a breastwork on land belonging to the towns of Seekonk and Rehoboth, at a place called Kettle Point; and to solicit the citizens of Seekonk to assist in building said fortification. By vote, granted the request of said committee so far as related to Seekonk, and chose a committee to assist in raising the fortification.

March 5, 1832, voted, that the committee chosen by the town to purchase a farm to keep the poor of said town upon, be requested to procure a farm agreeable to the vote of said town. Church Gray, Samuel Allen and Simeon Walker were the committee who made the purchase.

The Congregational church of Seekonk was the earliest, and for a long time the only church in Rehoboth. The existence of this church is coeval with the first permanent settlement of Rehoboth, and its history embraces a period of upward of two hundred years. It was a colony from the church in Weymouth, Mass.

The first meeting for discussing the propriety of attempting to establish a Baptist church in this part of the town, was held 17th December, 1793. After several meetings, the church was organized Nov. 27, 1794, consisting of forty members.

A Lyceum was established in Seekonk in the winter of 1834. Besides the resources of its own members, it was enabled, from its proximity to Providence, to avail itself of the aid of the learned and scientific men of that city, and of the able professors of Brown University. In 1835, a neat and commodious building was erected by the members of the Lyceum for their meetings.

The Seekonk Classical Institute, for instruction in the classics and higher English branches, with the modern languages, was established in 1835.

This town is bounded on the north by Pawtucket, on the east by Rehoboth, and on the west by the Seekonk and Providence Rivers.

Agriculture is the principal business of Seekonk.

The Town Clerk is W. C. Ormsbee.

SOMERSET.

This town was set off from Swansea and incorporated by the name of Somerset in 1790.

It containstwo villages, viz, Somerset, where the post-office is located, and Potterville, so called from its potteries of stone and earthenware.

The Indian name of Somerset was "Shewamet." It is situated about one and a half miles north from Fall River.

The Old Colony and Fall River Railroad passes through this town, having a station in the north part of the village, where there is a railroad bridge over the Taunton River.

The present Town Clerk is J. D. Cartwright.

SWANSEA.

The ancient town of Swansea comprised within its limits the present town with Somerset and Barrington and most of Warren, R. I. Nearly all of this territory was purchased of the Indians.

There was an Indian town here near the residence of Massasoit in 1621. In 1623, Edw. Winslow and John Hampden visited Massasoit, going by the residence of Corbitant, the Sachem of the Pocassets, who dwelt at Metapoiset, now Gardner's Neck. A part of Swansea was in the Pocasset country, which was governed by Corbitant, but Massasoit was his superior sachem. This territory was quite well inhabited by the Indians. The English settled here as early as 1632. And it is recorded that Massasoit, to secure himself against the Narragansetts, "fled to an English house at Sowams," where dwelt three Englishmen.

March 7, 1652, the lands of this locality were purchased and divided between William Bradford, Thomas Prence, Edw. Winslow, Capt. Myles Standish, Thomas Willett, Mr. White, Mr. Cushman, John Winslow, John Adams, Experience Mitchell, and Thomas Clarke.

In the following year, a conveyance was made of certain lands by Massasoit, who now called himself Ossamaquin, and by his son Wamsetto, to Thomas Prence, Gent., Thomas Willett, Gent., Myles Standish, Gent., and Josias Winslow, Gent., for and in behalf of themselves and divers of the inhabitants of Plymouth Jurisdiction.

Large purchases were also made this year of the Indians within the limits of Swansea, by Thomas Willett and Nathaniel Paine.

Metapoiset Neck was conveyed by "Philip, alias Pumatarkeam, Chief Sachem of Mount Hope, Cossumpsett, and all the territories thereunto belonging," to William Brenton, Esq., of Newport, R. I., by deed dated June 23, 1664.

Rev. John Myles, a Baptist minister, from Swansea, Wales, G. B., had a share in the grant of lands at Wannamoiset, afterwards included generally in this town.

Capt. Thomas Willett, a magistrate, and a man of great ability and enterprise, having large possessions at Narragansett near by, came and settled here. Hugh Cole and some others followed. Capt. Willett and Mr. Myles fraternized and lived together in peace, although of different religious views. They respected each other's opinions, and soon removed the minor difficulties which too often embarrass the progress of useful enterprises.

These two gentlemen may be justly styled the fathers of Swansea. Capt. W. became subsequently the first English Mayor of New York. He died about the year 1679. Rev. Mr. Myles died in 1683.

In 1670 it was ordered that the lands to be hereafter granted should be proportioned according to the three ranks. That is, persons of the first rank should have three acres, persons of the second rank two acres, and those of the third rank one acre.

"And it shall be in the power of the Selectmen for the time being, or committee for admission of inhabitants, to admit of, and place such as shall be received as inhabitants into either of said ranks, as they shall judge fit, till the full number of threescore such inhabitants shall be made up."

This singular division, reminding one of the old Roman orders, Patrician, Equestrian, and Plebeian, was peculiar to this town, and existed nowhere else in New England. It soon became distasteful to the majority of the inhabitants, and fell into disuse. But while this rule was in force, some were raised from one rank to another, others were debased, and still others were refused any rank, and ordered to quit the town.

At a town meeting, December 19, 1673, it was voted, unanimously, "that a school be forthwith set up in this town for teaching of grammar, rhetoric, arithmetic, and the tongues of Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, also to read English and to write, and that the salary of forty pounds per annum, in current country pay, be duly paid; and that Mr. John Myles, the present pastor of the church here assembling, be schoolmaster; otherwise to have power to dispose the same to an able schoolmaster during the said pastor's life," etc.

In 1675, King Philip's Indian war broke out, and in less than a week overwhelmed Swansea, leaving it a desolation.

TAUNTON.

The first Englishmen to visit this locality were Edward Winslow and Stephen Hopkins, in 1621, when they went to visit Massasoit. They found it desolated by the plague of 1612.

At Tetiquett and Namasket there were Indian villages. The territory of Taunton, including Berkley and Raynham, was claimed by the Sachem of Tetiquett. The whole shore of the river had been thickly populated, and there were many unburied remains of those who had died in "the great sickness." Tradition says there were settlers here as early as 1626, but, if so, they were transient and solitary men, who held the lands by occupancy only.

One of the first purchasers of Taunton was Henry Uxley, who came and went without leaving any account of himself. His house and lot were purchased by Richard Williams, one of the fathers of this town. He was a Welshman and a relation of Roger Williams. He was born in 1599; was a Deputy from Taunton to the General Court at Plymouth, in 1646, '48, '50, '51.

First meeting-house, 1647. Calf pasture purchased for it. The second was commenced May 19, 1729. The third was built in 1789. The Spring-Street Society occupied it in 1852. Taunton formerly contained an area of eight miles square, and received, at the incorporation, A.D. 1640, the name. Rev. William Hooke, the first pastor of Taunton, born in 1601, a native of Southampton, England, remained in Taunton not far from seven years.

Dr. Ezra Deane was the first physician who practised in Taunton. He was the eldest son of Ezra, the second son of Water Deane. His mother was a daughter of Deacon Samuel Edson, of Bridgewater. It is generally supposed he was the father of the family remarkable for its longevity, in the history of the Deanes, eleven of his children living more than a thousand years. One of his daughters, Theodora, who lived to be more than a hundred, was the mother of Dr. Job Godfrey, one of the most eminent physicians of the town in the last century. Dr. Deane died July 1st, 1737.

The first apothecary shop ever opened in Taunton was Mr. Daniel Brewer's, who came from Danbury, Conn., in 1785; he was once a minister, but subsequently embraced the views of Robert Sandeman.

Hon. Samuel White was probably the first lawyer residing in Taunton. He was a native of Braintree, graduated at Harvard in 1731, and about 1745 commenced the practice of the law in this town. He was born in 1710, and died March 20, 1769, aged 59. He had the honor of presiding over the House of Representatives during the period of the Stamp Act. It was a circular signed by him as speaker of the House, which called together the first Congress that assembled at New York in October 1765. The house he built and occupied is yet standing, called the Bowen house, on the old road to the Weir.

The situation of Taunton prevented it from growing for some time, as none but the brave dared to settle so far inland among the Indians. About this time Elizabeth Pool, a wealthy lady of Taunton, in England, who had first settled at Dorchester, Mass., undertook to establish a colony at Cohannet. All the territory around was inhabited by Indian tribes. Yet Miss Pool prosecuted her design with a fearless spirit stimulated thereto by religious enthusiasm, and her efforts were crowned with success.

She died in 1654, and her kinsmen and legatees placed a monument over her grave with an inscription which commemorates her many virtues. She was a lover of justice as well as piety, and ever displayed a kind and charitable disposition toward the heathen tribes with whom she came in contact. She seems to have been among the first to admit the Indians' right to the soil, and she purchased her lands by giving a fair price before occupying them.

The plantation of Cohammet was incorporated by the name of Taunton on the third of March, 1639.

Among the ancient purchasers of territory of Taunton were Rev. Francis Doty, or Doughty, Henry Uxley, Joseph Wilson, Benjamin Wilson, William Coy, George Hall, George Macy. The Pools and most of the purchasers besides the above-named came from Dorchester, Mass. But Mr. John Brown came from Plymouth. In a work called "Plain Dealing, or News from New England," written by Thomas Lechford, in 1641, it is stated that Mr. William Hooke and Mr. Nicholas Street were both residents of Taunton at the same time, one as pastor and the other as teacher. They both seem to have come with Elizabeth Pool and her brother William Pool. Mr. Street had married her sister.

Of the eighty purchasers of the tract of land, bought of the Indians, was also Richard Williams, who has already been mentioned in this sketch of Taunton. He married Frances Dighton, sister of Catharine Dighton, who was, after his death, married to Governor Thomas Dudley of Roxbury, and became the mother of Governor Joseph Dudley.

Mr. Williams has many descendants in Taunton, as well as other parts of the country. Baylies, the Plymouth historian, believes Mr. Williams to have been related to Oliver Cromwell. He represented Taunton in the Plymouth Colonial Court several years, and seems to have been the Patriarch of the plantation at Cohannet. It has also been conjectured that he was a brother to Roger Williams, of Providence, the father of Rhode Island.

John Strong, son of Richard Strong of Taunton, Eng., came to New England with his sister Eleanor, in the "Mary and John," in 1630. The sister married Walter Dean. They came from Dorchester, Mass., to Taunton at its settlement in 1637. After the Indian War, Mr. Strong removed to Northampton, and became the progenitor of many illustrious families bearing his name in various parts of the country. His lot in Taunton was on Dean street, adjoining those of John and Walter Dean.

These two brothers by the name of Dean took up their farms on the west bank of the larger river, about a mile from the centre of the present village in what has ever since been called "Dean street."

John Dean's wife's name was Alice, and their son John is said to have been the first white child born in Taunton. This son John, born about 1639, died during the "Great Snow," Feb. 18, 1717. His grave-stone is yet to be seen at the "Neck of Land Burial-place," which is the oldest in town. His posterity are numerous in Taunton and vicinity.

Walter Dean, brother of the first John, was born in Chard, England, between 1615 and 1620. His place is in the vale of "Taunton Dean," that is, Taunton Valley, about ten miles from the city of Taunton, on the river Tone. These Deans were men of influence, and Walter held various offices and was Deputy from Taunton to Plymouth Court in 1640. His posterity are numerous in Taunton. A descendant of this family, William Reed Dean, Esq. who is a distinguished antiquary, has published an account of his family, and also one of the Leonard family, who were the first great manufacturers of Taunton. They were interested in iron works at Lynn, Braintree, Rowley Village and Taunton, and at a later date in those of Canton; and the saying is often heard that, "Where you can find iron works, there you will find a Leonard." Their old forge has been going for over two hundred years, and is still in successful operation. It was owned in 1850 by Theodore Dean, Esq., a descendant from the Leonards. The old Leonard house stood a few rods from the forge but a few years since. It had been occupied by the family down to the seventh generation. James Leonard was the progenitor of the Leonards of Taunton, Raynham and Norton. He had been engaged in the iron manufacture in England, and was one of the first to establish it in this country. His descendants have become numerous. The proprietor of this "Directory and History of Bristol County" is one of them, being of the seventh generation, from his daughter Rebecca.

WESTPORT.

This town, situated at the entrance of Buzzard's Bay, at the head of Nokohok River, originally a part of the old township of Dartmouth, was separately incorporated at the time of the division in 1787. It is about thirteen miles in length, and four in breadth, on an average. It has a good harbor. Two branches of the Acoaxet River, coming down to the tide-waters, leave a point between them which has long been known as Westport Point, and is a thriving little place. This locality was once the rendezvous or residence of many Indians, who named it after the river. This "Acoaxet" of the Indians is now a handsome maritime village. The river runs more than twelve miles through the town, affording a good water-power, upon which are located the manufactories. Westport is now quite largely engaged in the whale fishery. About eight miles north is another village, called "Head of Westport." This place is eight miles northeast from Fall River. Westport is sixty-seven miles south from Boston, and twelve southwest from New Bedford.

Westport River is a stream of considerable importance, and is divided into two branches; the east river, or Noquochoke, is supplied by two streams which take their rise in Fall River. From the head of the river to its mouth, where it unites with the west branch and empties into Buzzard's Bay, is about eight miles. The west branch is much shorter, and is about three miles and a half from its head to its entrance. The widest part of each branch is about one mile, but where they unite, a little more than two miles. The west branch is more properly called the Acoaxet.

Westport has furnished a large number of the best seamen and shipmasters in the whaling service.

One of the most interesting and enterprising citizens was Captain Paul Cuffee, a man of great worth, and noble character, born at Cuttyhunk, one of the Elizabeth Islands, in 1759. His father was a native of Africa, a slave belonging to ——— Slocum, of Dartmouth. His mother was a native Indian, by the name of Ruth Moses. It was the custom for the slave to take the surname of his master, and the father of Paul was probably known as Cuffee Slocum. But Paul, with the spirit of a freeman, chose the name his father brought from Africa. In 1773, when Paul was about fourteen years of age, his father, dying, left a widow with six daughters to the care of him and his brothers. Although he had no learning, except what he received from the hand of friendship, yet by that means he advanced to a considerable degree of knowledge in arithmetic and navigation. Of the latter he learned enough in two weeks to enable him to command his own vessel in his voyages to many ports in the Southern States, the West Indies, England, Russia, and Africa.

At the age of sixteen he became a sailor, and made a whaling voyage to the Bay of Mexico. His second voyage was to the West Indies; but on the third, he was captured by the British during the war of the Revolution, about the year 1776, and retained three months as a prisoner at New York. After his release he went to Westport, and worked at farming for two years. During this time Paul and his brother, John Cuffee, were called upon by the collector of the district for the payment of a personal tax. This they for some time refused, upon the ground of their not possessing the full right of citizens; but being peacefully inclined, they finally paid the demand, and then sent in a petition to the Legislature, representing the injustice done to the free colored people in this particular. Their petition created considerable excitement, as well as debate, and was strongly opposed by a few; but a large majority were convinced of the reasonableness of their claim, "and in defiance of the prejudice of the time, they passed a law rendering all free persons of color liable to taxation, according to the ratio established for white men, and granting them all the privileges belonging to other citizens."

At the age of twenty, Paul, in company with another brother of his, David, built a boat. They were to navigate her together; but it then being war time, and his brother, having never been at sea, after having proceeded a part of the way on their voyage to Connecticut he became so much alarmed for their safety that Paul was obliged to return with him. Soon after this, Paul undertook a trip to Nantucket with a boat-load of produce, but in crossing Buzzard's Bay was seized by "refugee pirates," who robbed him of his boat and cargo. Nothing daunted, in connection with his brother before mentioned, they built another boat; and having procured a cargo upon his credit, Paul again started for Nantucket, and was again chased by pirates; but night coming, he escaped from them, but ran his boat upon a rock on one of the Elizabeth Islands, and so badly injured her as to render it necessary for him to return to his home on the Westport River. After having repaired his boat, he again set off for Nantucket, reaching there in safety, and disposed of his cargo to good advantage. On a subsequent voyage, however, he was again taken by pirates, and deprived of all except his boat. Still he continued his trips to Nantucket, until he had acquired enough to look for a more lucrative business. Soon after, he obtained a vessel of about twelve tons burthen, and hired a man to help him. His voyages at this time were mostly to Connecticut. At the age of twenty-five he married a descendant of the same tribe to which his mother belonged. For some time after this, he resided at home, and was busily engaged in farming; but his predilections were for the sea, and, having procured a vessel of eighteen tons, he sailed for St. George's Banks, and returned with a cargo of codfish. This proving profitable, awakened a spirit for the business in his fellow-townsmen, who entered upon it, and it became a source of considerable profit to the inhabitants.

Having formed a connection with his brother-in-law, Michael Wainer, who had several sons well qualified for the sea service, they built a vessel of twenty-five tons, and made two successful voyages to the Straits of Belle-Isle. His next vessel was forty-two tons burthen, in which he made several profitable whaling voyages. In 1793 he took a valuable cargo of oil and bone to Philadelphia, which was disposed of to advantage. In 1795 his new vessel of sixty-nine tons burthen was launched, and named the "Ranger." Having sold his two boats, he purchased a cargo for his schooner, valued at two thousand dollars. This he disposed of at Norfolk, Virginia and loaded his vessel with corn upon the eastern shore of Maryland, which he purchased at a low price, after considerable difficulty on account of the color of himself and his crew, which somewhat alarmed the people at first, for fear of the unfavorable influence it would have upon their slaves seeing men of their own complexion engaged in such different employment from their own servile labor. His cargo consisted of three thousand bushels of corn, with which he returned to Westport; and that article being in great demand at that time, it was rapidly disposed of, yielding him a profit of one thousand dollars. Another cargo soon after proved as profitable; and, with subsequent success in the freighting business, the addition to his property was sufficient to enable him to purchase the house in which his family resided, and the adjoining farm, for which he paid thirty-five hundred dollars.

In the year 1800 a brig of one hundred and sixty-two tons burthen was built, of which he owned one half, and placed in the command of his nephew, Thomas Wainer, a man of much respectability and capacity for that situation.

The next vessel, of which Paul owned three-fourths, was the ship Alpha, built in 1806. Of this vessel he was the commander, the rest of the crew consisting of seven men of color. In this ship he made a voyage from Wilmington to Savannah, thence to Gottenburg and back to Philadelphia.

After his return from this voyage, the brig Traveller, of one hundred and nine tons burthen, was built at Westport, of which he owned one-half. After this period his mercantile and agricultural business had so much increased that he found it necessary to remain at home for several years.

Although Paul Cuffee received much attention and kindness from his fellow-citizens, and particularly from the members of the society of Friends, his interest and sympathy for the people of his own color, were ever uppermost in his mind. The English colony at Sierra Leone, which at this period had enlisted much of the attention of philanthropists of Great Britain, awakened in his benevolent mind a strong desire to co-operate in their operations; and his efforts to contribute to its welfare did not prove ineffectual.

He afterwards became a worthy and much respected member of the Society of Friends, and occasionally appeared in the ministry. His communications were usually short and modestly expressed, but marked by good sense anda deep devotional feeling. His great respectability and noble character rendered him a welcome guest at the house and table of the late venerable William Rotch and other members of his family, as well as to the Society of Friends generally. On one of his visits he stopped at one of the public houses of New Bedford; and while warming himself by the fire, in the traveller's room, the hour of dinner having arrived, the landlady came to Friend Cuffee and told him that she would prepare a separate table for him. He politely thanked her for the attention, and then informed her, much to her chagrin, that he had previously accepted an invitation to dine with William Rotch.

Upon one occasion William Rotch, sen., and some English Friends attended the meeting in Westport, of which Paul Cuffee was a member, the meeting-house being but a short distance from his house. At the close of the meeting, the strangers, with their kind companion, Rotch, were invited to dine with Friend Cuffee, a kindness which was readily accepted by his friend R. on the behalf of himself and his guests. After the dinner was laid upon the table in a neat and bountiful manner, Friend Rotch observed that Paul and his wife had no chairs set for themselves, and were modestly preparing to retire, or remain until their guests had dined. At this Friend Rotch arose, and, in a firm but kind manner, addressing his host and hostess, said that he could not consent to such an arrangement, and that he should not take his seat at the table unless Paul and his wife presided. With all his gentleness and humanity, no man was more unflinching when a matter of conscience was concerned than Friend Rotch, and Paul was too well acquainted with this trait in his friend's character to demur. The company was soon seated, and an agreeable as well as bountiful dinner partaken of.

Paul Cuffee, or Cuff, is represented to have been a man of noble personal appearance, tall, portly, and dignified in his bearing. His complexion was not dark, and his hair was straight. After he became a member of the Society of Friends, he wore the plain dress. His farm was situated upon the west shore of the Westport River, a short distance below "Hix's bridge." The house stood near the shore, where he also had a wharf and a storehouse. Here his vessels were built.

MANUFACTURER OF

THE RANDALL SKELETON GRATE BAR.

Patented February 9, 1869.

TESTIMONIALS.

BOSTON, January 11, 1869.

A. O. CORBETT, — Dear Sir: The Randall Skeleton Grate Bars purchased of you in October last, have been thoroughly tested by us under our eighty horse power boiler, fire surface of which is five (5) feet in length by four (4) feet in width. The bars have not sprung or warped in the least, but have proved to our entire satisfaction. In regard to the economy of fuel, we think they are superior to any bars now in use.

Yours, &c., BRIGGS & ROBINSON.

BOSTON, January 11, 1869.

A. O. CORBETT, — Dear Sir: I have used the Randall Skeleton Grate Bar in three large boilers, connected with the St. James Hotel, for some six months, and with entire satisfaction. I consider they possess many advantages over any article of the kind which I am acquainted with.

JOHN H. KAZUR,
Engineer St. James Hotel.

PORTLAND, January 9, 1869.

A. O. CORBETT, — DEAR SIR: Yours of the 4th instant is at hand. You wish information in regard to the Randall Skeleton Grate Bar. I have used them in one furnace on the Steamer John Brooks for eight months, and I like them very much; they are as good now as when I put them in. They give better draft and burn the coal up cleaner, and make less ashes than any other bars; but, as for saving fuel, I cannot say, for I did not weigh our coal, but I think they do not burn so much as the old bar. I like them so well that I am going to have a full set when I start again, and so is the Steamer New England.

Yours, truly, F. M. FOOTE,
Chief Engineer Steamer John Brooks.

BOSTON CUSTOM HOUSE, January 14, 1869.

A. O. CORBETT, — Dear Sir: In answer to your inquiry how the Randall Grate Bars work, I will say. I have used them nearly a year, and they are as good to-day as when put in. I considee the very best recommendations that can be given of them none too good.

Yours, truly, H. ROBERTS, Enginrer.

BOSTON, May 8, 1868.

MESSRS. GEO. F. BLAKE & CO.

Gentlemen,—We will say in reply to yours of this date, that the special Steam Pump you built for us, pumps hot or cooled lard without the slightest difficulty. We consider your device for keeping the pump always clear and ready for action of great value and entirely original. It possesses an advantage over all other steam pumps in the simplicity of its arrangement, giving a ready access to the examination of its valves. We believe yours to be the only one yet constructed which will pump lard at all times and seasons of the y ear satisfactorily. Your No. 3 Pump, which feeds our boiler, works to our entire satisfaction.
